

Job market participation for people with disabilities

For people with mental, psychological or physical disabilities, it can be a huge challenge to function independently - or even partially independently - within the economy. Through coaching, support and mediation, Sentro Solari helps these people find a fitting position within the private sector. Individuals who qualify can contact Sentro Solari themselves, or can be signed up through an agency.

Personal and professional approach

After their application, job seekers are invited to an intake meeting with one of Sentro Solari's employment counselors, who then register them as clients. The goal of the interview is finding out what kind of work environment would best suit the client's personality, capacities and preferences. Sentro Solari also provides clients with proper preparation for their future jobs by paying attention to professional skills and corporate culture. If this carefully conducted procedure establishes that the client is not ready for the conventional job market, he or she will be directed elsewhere.

Private sector

Businesses approached by our employment counselors about potential placements receive extensive information about expectations and support. Together, we determine whether any adjustments or coaching will be required for a particular client to perform optimally. This will continue after the client has started working.

Central function

Besides providing coaching and support in finding appropriate jobs for disabled individuals, Sentro Solari is also establishing a resource center for job market participation for people with a disability. A facility that initiates research, stimulates collaboration with partners, and facilitates the development of expertise for professionals. The resource center will also serve as a helpdesk for everyone involved, and as a registration point for job seekers.
